Enduring Liminality: Crisis, Temporality, and the Politics of Sacrifice

From climate disaster to racial injustice, global political and economic instabilities to the spread of deadly disease, crisis itself has become an extended and pronounced condition of life. Within this enduring liminality of crisis, a call to sacrifice has become a central organizing logic for the safeguarding of the planet’s future, and in turn, the ontological itineraries of the human.

Join us for this virtual conference as we explore a range of interdisciplinary case studies and discuss the efficacy and limits of the politics of sacrifice at our contemporary conjuncture.

November 5th-6th
Friday, November 5th: 12:30pm-5pm (EDT)
Saturday, November 6th: 12pm-2:30pm (EDT)

More Information and Register Here (Hyperlink)

Zoom Link (Hyperlink)

Sponsored by:
Emory University Hightower Speaker Funds