

CONNECTIONS IN ANTHROPOLOGY

LCDR Howard Chiou, MD, PhD

Lieutenant Commander, USPHS
Preventive Medicine Resident, CDC

LCDR Howard Chiou, MD, PhD is a U.S. Public Health Service physician who joined the CDC as an officer in the Epidemic Intelligence Service, assigned to the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health. He recently completed the program and is now assigned to the CDC One Health Office as a resident in the CDC Preventive Medicine Residency. A graduate of the Emory University MD/PhD Program in anthropology, his dissertation research focused on culture change in healthcare. After graduating, he worked as visiting faculty at Stanford University on applying positive deviance methods to intensive care units, and completed a transitional year residency at Santa Clara Valley Medical Center.

LCDR Chiou will share his own experiences, as well as discuss opportunities for anthropology graduates to work in government positions, and highlight training programs like the CDC Epidemic Intelligence Service, the CDC Preventive Medicine Residency, and opportunities in the U.S. Public Health Service.

Fri Oct 30
12-1pm EDT

RSVP in Handshake.

Join us via Zoom:

<https://emory.zoom.us/j/92617323047?pwd=aHFaRktFbmhLTEJlBdEdFcnllVktudz09>